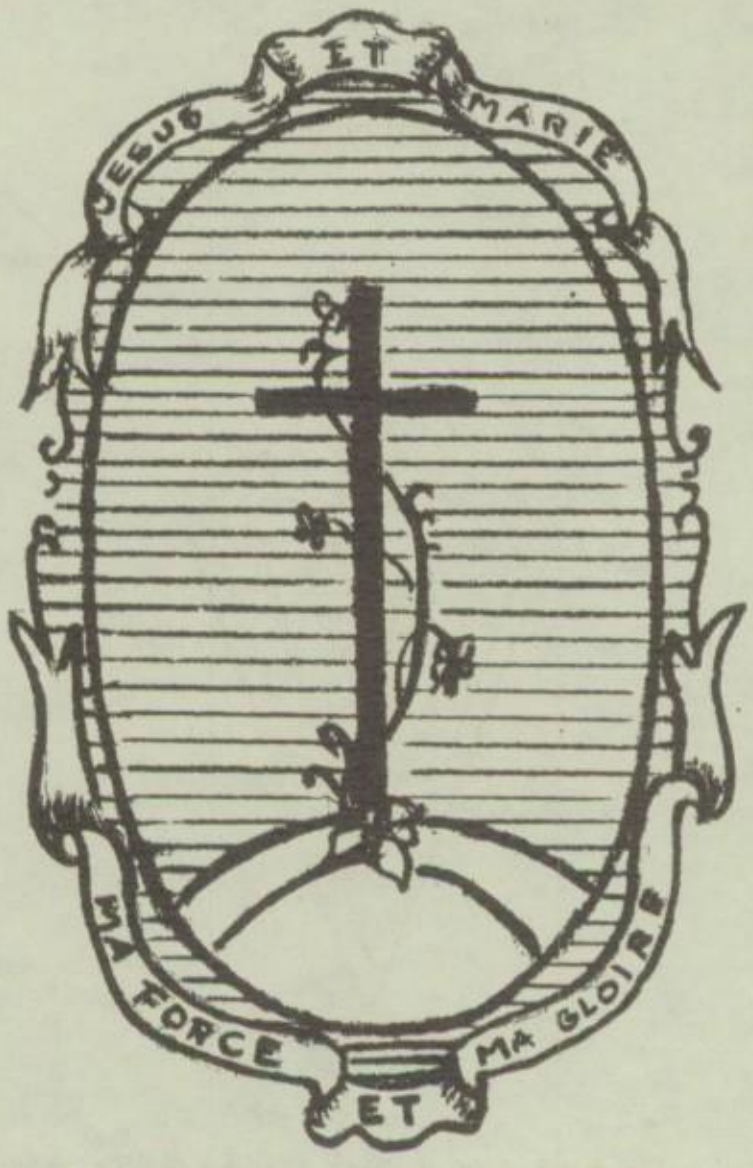
Frances Moran, '40.



To our teachers, The Sisters of the Holy Names of Jesus and Mary, on this hundredth year of their establishment as a Congregation, we gratefully dedicate this Manakata of 1945. May their close imitation of the Divine Teacher render them ever more powerful in extending the Kingdom of God.

MOTHER MARY ROSE

Mother Mary Rose realized the lofty purpose of a life of prayer and penance when in her last six years she founded and firmly established the Congregation of the Sisters of the Holy Names of Jesus and Mary. As a sister and a leader, her intense zeal for the salvation of souls and her endowment of learning and culture so inspired her associates that her eminent virtues are perpetuated to this day in her Congregation. Her way of life was not easy but was rendered glorious by constant self-denial and complete confidence in God. Her memory is held in grateful veneration and it is our fervent prayer that Mother Mary Rose may soon be honored among God's canonized saints.

CLASS PROPHECY

In this the 1,956th year of our Lord, the warm August sun beats down on the thriving metropolis of Spokane, the city by the Silver Falls (slogan it's the water). The city is bustling with eager delegates (ourselves among them) awaiting the arrival of the favorite presidential candidate for the National Republican ticket, Miss Margaret Higgins. The train is already 30 minutes overdue when Hazel Temple, business manager and personal secretary to Miss Higgins, rises to read a telegram which she has just received. The message is from the engineer, Patricia Moore, who apologetically states that the train will be a few hours late, because she was afflicted with a case of "Fits." The delegate from Spokane, Jill Albi, representing the athletic square chair, suggests that the convention adjourns to the Flodium Theater which her former classmate Mary Anna Oliver is opening this afternoon. The suggestion is unanimously carried and the delegates move on to the theater. Approaching Trent and Bernard, our attention is snatched from the gay lights of the cinema to a billboard, by a familiar smiling face. On second look we discover it is our old friend Elsie Manning, now better known as Madame Elpierre Manne; announcing the remarkable qualities of her new hair restorer. In her usual unselfishness she attributes all the credit for its discovery to her two research chemists Charmaine Blessing and Peggy Green.

We arrive at the theater in time to see Loretta Von Mills, snuggled under three layers of silver fox and accompanied by Fifi, her Chiwawa pup. She answers our greeting with her usual jovial smile and being thus encouraged we approach her to exchange a few words. Imagine our surprise when she tells us that she was fortunate enough to obtain the services of Lois Stengar, to blow up the bubbles for Fifi's bubble bath. We graciously accept her invitation to join her in her box, and as we enter we hear the clear voice of Patricia Bennett in her closing line, "Come up and see me some Tom." We struggle as noiselessly as possible to our places and are no more than settled when we are aware of the presence of another in our box. Miss Von Mills shrieks and grasping wildly pulls up a very disgruntled little boy from his hiding place under the seat. In confusion he stammers, "I'm Joan Klein's little boy Andrew and the truant officer is looking for me." No sooner had he uttered these words when Betty Vigil appeared on the scene and led him out by his ear.

JUNIORS

During the past year the achievements of the Junior class have covered every field, scholastic, athletic and social.

The scholastic endeavors of the class were crowned by the triumphs of two members, Joan Harlow receiving second place in a city wide essay contest on the life of Pope Pius XII, and Joan Kroetch winning first prize on a subsequent essay contest sponsored by the "Navy." A panel discussion was held before the student body for the explanation and promotion of the slogan "Read for a Better World."

The eager volleyball, basetball and softball teams were heartily supported by their confident classmates.

The Juniors were not unmindful of their duties to God and country. By sponsoring a candy and cake sale, they raised funds for the carnations which graced the altars on the occasion of the centenary Mass and for Forty Hours Devotions. Each girl displayed her enthusiasm in Red Cross work by making pillow covers and donating gifts.

A festive banquet, given in honor of the Senior class of "45" brought to a close another year of praiseworthy accomplishments for the Juniors and left them hopefully looking forward to being Seniors together.

SOPHOMORE A

This, our second year at Holy Names Academy, has been an exceptionally active one. The initiation of the Freshmen at the beginning of the year, was the first of our many endeavors. This was followed by a Catholic Action Play portraying the life of Mother Mary Rose. Through our good sportsmanship and loyalty to our school which has predominated throughout the year, we have gained the coveted Good Sportsmanship Banner and our true spirit also twice won for us the Honor Banner. We have not only been loyal to the school, but our country as well as our donation of two afghans to the Red Cross, has proven. With charitable spirit toward God's less fortunate we sponsored a Stamp Contest, and an afternoon mixer. A farewell party in April which was enjoyed by all, climaxed another happy and successful year.

The Sophomore class unheld their motto, "Keep Troth," with the Freshmen initiation marking the beginning of a year of activity. Their outstanding loyalty and cooperation in the many school activities has merited for them the possession of the Honor Banner for the third consecutive time. The class heartily supported their team in every sport and held the Sportsmanship Banner as a result. With the double success of their stamp contest and afternoon mixer for the benefit of the Foreign Missions, a zeal for less spiritually gifted friends was displayed. A lecture by "Miss Fortune," and rollicking Sophomore party in April terminated a year of fun and accomplishments. With this spirit in view we can expect great things of this up-and-coming class of "47"

FRESHMEN A

In September 1944, forty-two determined girls entered the Freshmen A class with a true Holy Names spirit. Out to win, they began the year with eager volley-ball and basketball teams, inspired by their loyal classmates. The "Magazine" and "Bond Drive" had the full support of every Freshman A and slippers, gift boxes, and afghan squares were their contributions to the "Red Cross." In accordance with the ideals of Holy Names, Catholic Action was the center of their activities this year. With the grace of God, the untiring efforts of teachers, and the whole-hearted co-operation of classmates, every girl is looking forward to future years at Holy Names.

FRESHMEN B

L to Z includes many fine classmates and officers as we discovered during our first year at Holy Names.

We began our year with initiation and a picnic in the park. Putting forth all our earnest efforts we won the magazine drive and went over the top in the Bond Drive. Every girl made a fruitful retreat and carried through her resolutions by helping to win the subscription drive. Due to the reliability of each one of our girls the "Be on Time Banner" held an honored position in the Freshman B classroom throughout the year.

With "Onward Ever, Backward Never," our class motto as an inspiration the class of "48" is looking forward to equally successful years together at Holy Names.

TRI A

Once again the members of Tri-A cast backward glances on the achievements of a successful year. The first event, the Volleyball Tournament, opened with the Round Robin and concluded with the Senior Samboes triumphantly winning the cup. This year the Basketball Season also yielded her honors to the Senior Class in a thrilling night game. Baseball, hiking, badminton, table tennis, and skating are still in store for enthusiastic members and candidates.

Some of the outstanding accomplishments of the club were the purchasing of new drapes for the auditorium and the presenting of an album of records to the Music Department. A very successful paper drive was held in the fall and another is planned for the early spring.

Tri Angels, in its second year of publication has gained a wider circulation and is eagerly awaited each month by both the alumnae and present members.

All Tri-A girls consider this a red letter year and are hopefully contemplating what the future will bring.

Catholic Action Group

Patricia Moore
Prefect

During the past "year together," the Catholic Action Group has continued to carry on the work of the Christian Apostolate, under the capable leadership of our prefect, Patricia Moore, whose enthusiasm and fervor has spurred the entire group to greater achievements. Patricia was ably assisted by Anne Flanigan, Vice Prefect; Lois Scrivener, Secretary; Dorothy Broderson, Treasurer and the Class Consulters. This group formed its major plans at a vigil hour spent at the Academy on certain Sundays.

Our first goal this year was personal holiness through prayer, for we know that all Catholic Action has its roots in individual sanctity: sec ondly, we continued our Academy Spiritual Defense Corps with a purpose of gaining special graces for our war chaplains by prayer and self conquest. Each day at noon hour we met before the Blessed Sacrament and in united prayer begged peace and courage for all in the service of our Country.

Anne Flanigan
Vice Prefect

Among other activities have been the Living Rosary in October, Catholic Book Week programs, our campaign on the necessity of truth in business and social life and a very successful subscription drive during Catholic Press Month.

We wish to thank our faculty for their understanding help and the students for their wholehearted support.

Student Body Organization

PEGGY HIGGINS
President

During this year of 1944-45 under the inspiring leadership of Peggy Higgins, the Holy Names Student Body has reached a higher standard of responsibility and unity. The effort and aspiration of each has been to become a true example of what a Holy Names girl should be.

Our President has had assistance from Patricia Flaherty, Vice President; Joan O'Shea, Secretary, and Marjorie Bettenger, Sergeant-at-Arms. Girls serving on committees have cooperated in a democratic manner realizing that the success of school affairs depends upon the attitude of individuals. The large percentage of girls who earned honor awards at midyear gives evidence of excellent school spirit.

The sales of War Bonds and Saving Stamps in December totaled $42,350.00 and the Junior Red Cross activities have received our special attention. Programs for assemblies, Manakata, plays and skits for special occasions, indeed all student projects will be stored in the heart of each girl as precious memories of our "years together."

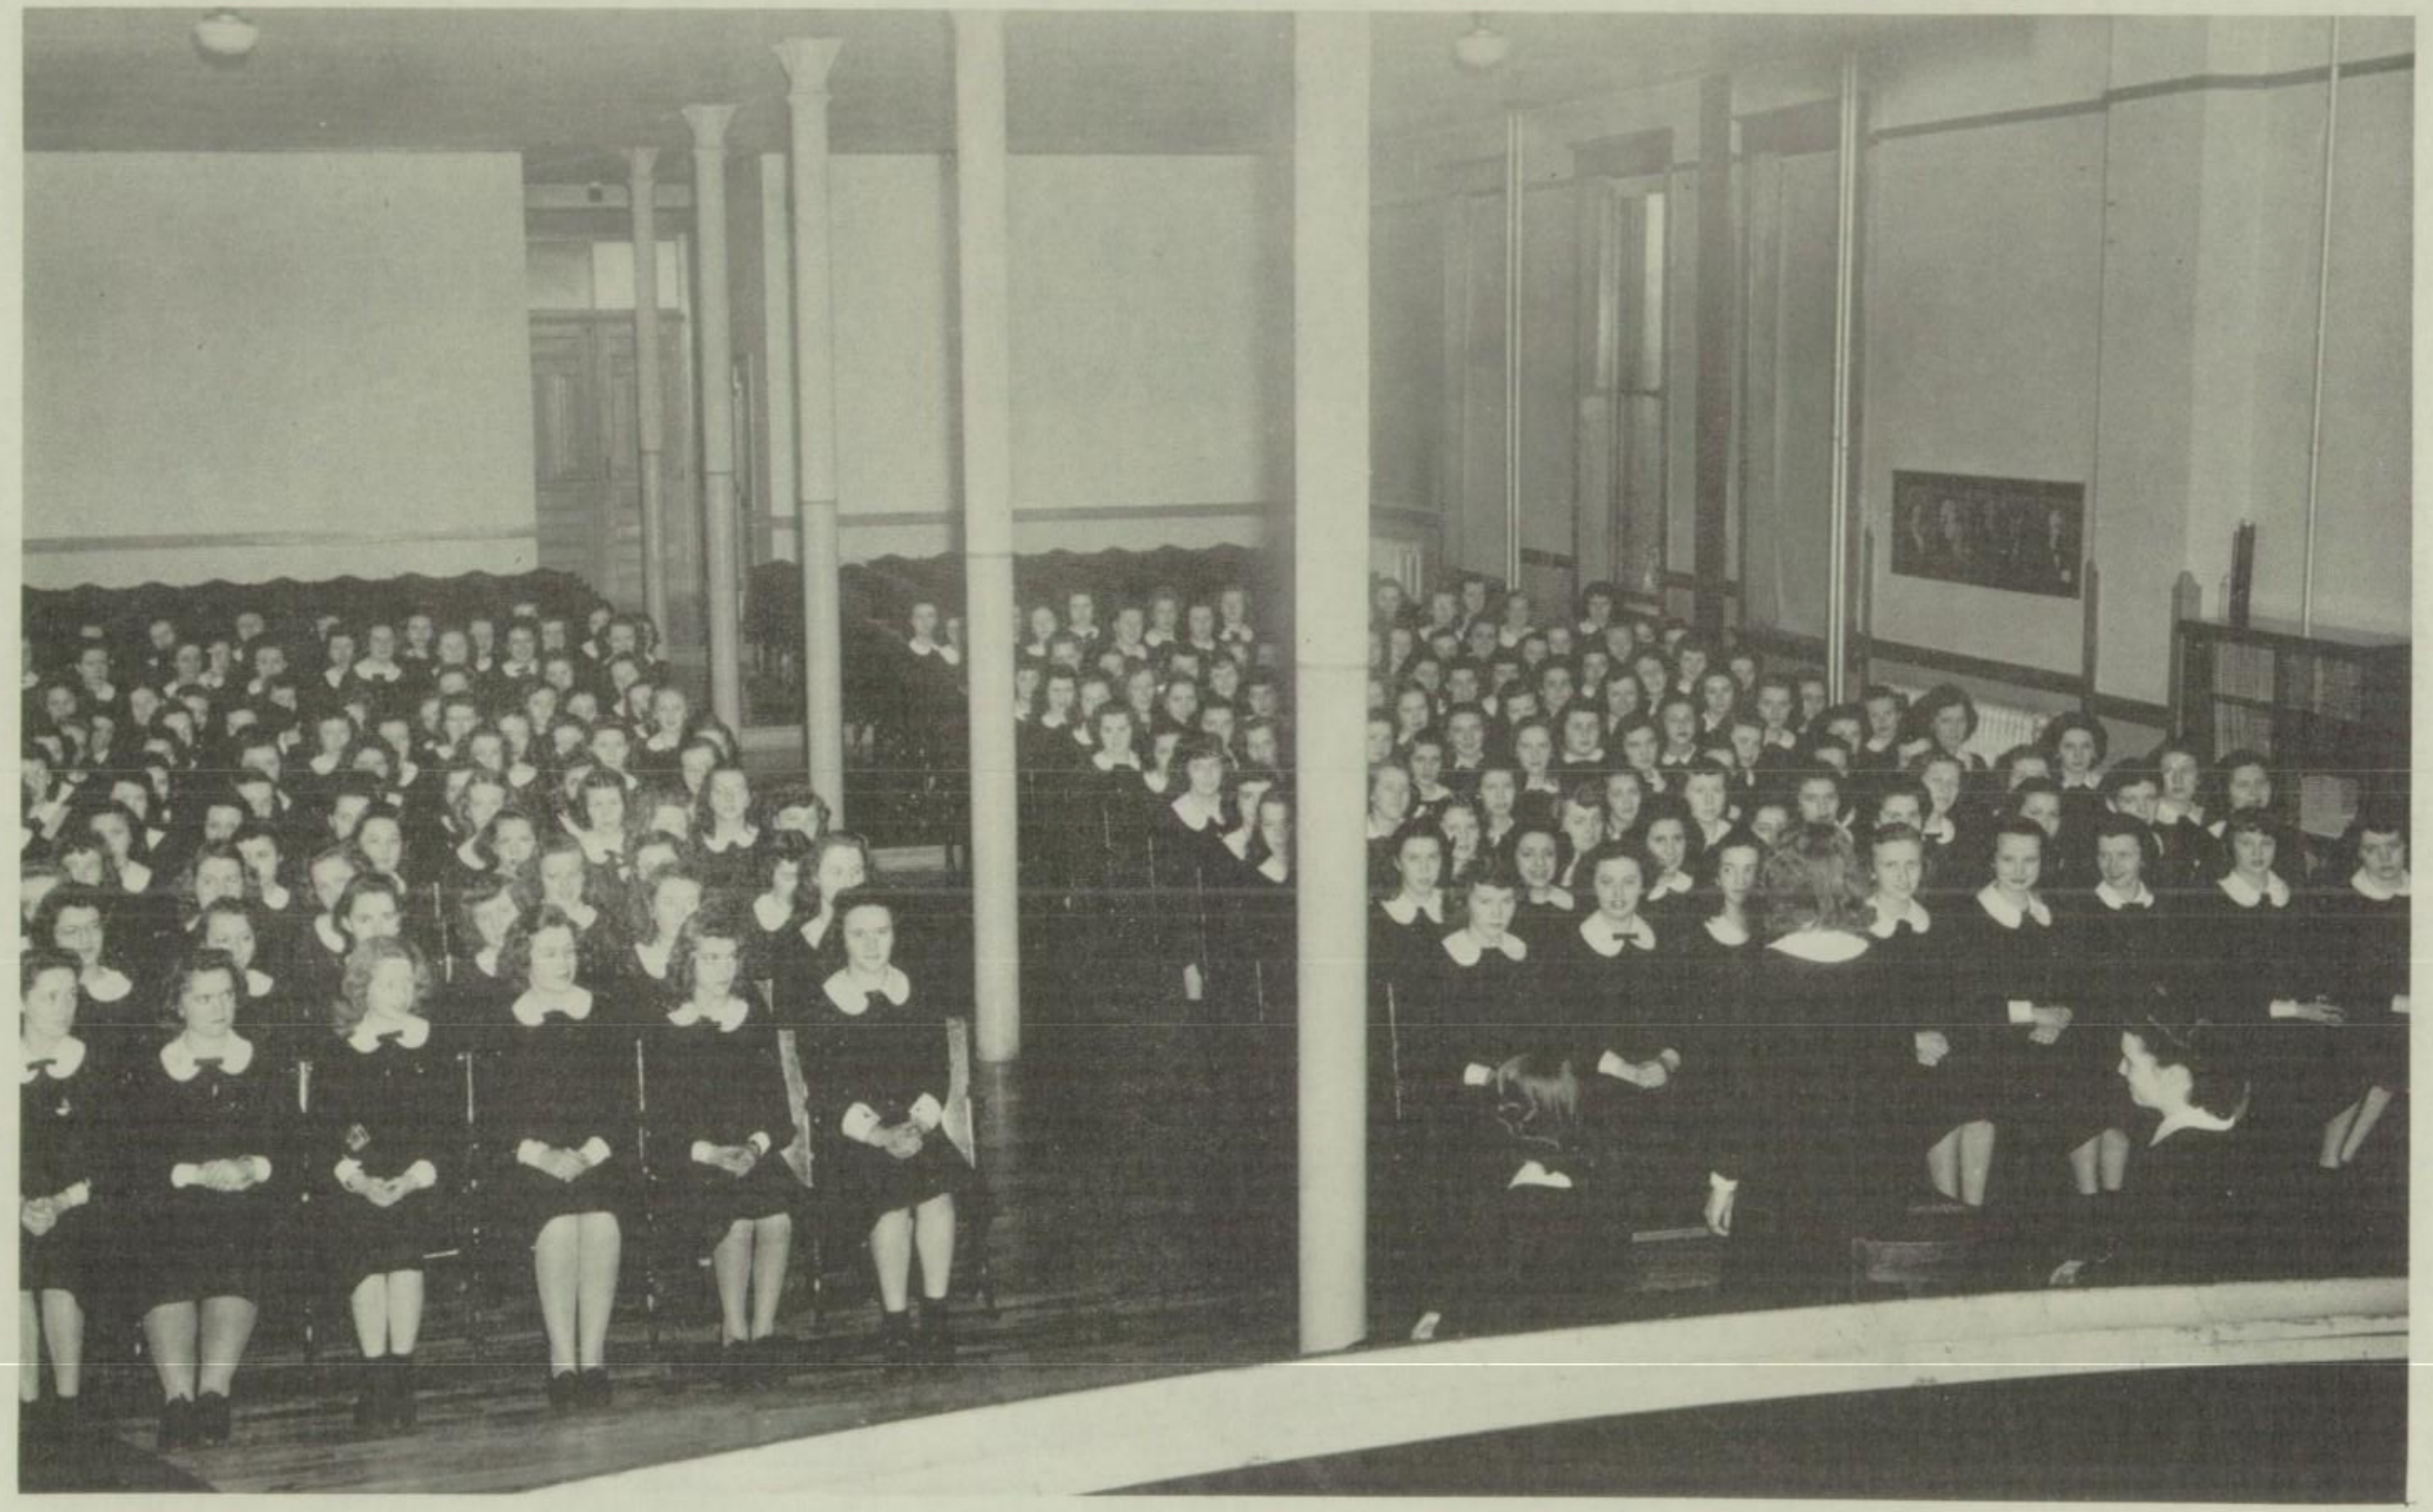
STUDENT COUNCIL



Rho Sigma Chi

Rho Sigma Chi, the senior resident student club, has been responsible again this year for many gay social occasions, and likewise for maintaining a very desirable spirit among the forty girls from every part of our great northwest. The chosen officers for 1944-45 were Josephine Duffy, President; Joan Hogan, Secretary; Virginia Mertens, Sergeant-at-Arms.

Some special events which leave happy memories are a tea for the sisters on Founders' Day, a costume party, a Christmas party, a party for Gonzaga boarders in the gymnasium and many enjoyable birthday dinners.

The congenial atmosphere of boarding school days welds lasting friendships and gives experience in meeting various situations which should prepare for the life awaiting.

THE RESURRECTION

A hush fell upon the entire world as a tiny ray of light crept over the far off horizon. The stars twinkled and shone, then slowly faded into oblivion as the crimson ridge of the sun outlined the eastern hills. Suddenly a supernatural light was seen as a heavenly being descended to the earth and lifted aside the obstructive stone blocking the way to a desolate tomb. Then surrounded by a dazzling and glorious radiance, He appeared wrapped in robes of snowy white, with hands which though pierced were strong beautiful and tender. His eyes reflected the infinite majesty of His soul and His face shone with a supreme beauty beyond description. The great phophecy had at last been fulfilled and the Lord Jesus Christ had risen.

Sharel Mace, '45.

MATER MARIA MEA

Her mantle white as snow
Keeps us here below
For her Son.
Her halo bright as gold
Forms our soul to her mold
Till Life's done.

The sun reflects her might
Blinding all with light
Do not fear:
For stars shine forth her love
Which she showers from above
On us here.

Oh Mary, Light of God
Let us walk where you have trod
Brave and true.
Oh Queen of all the earth
Let us serve Him from our birth
Just like you.

Mary Jane Meeks, '46

SELFISHNESS

Having barred You—
I have barred Power, infinite and vaster than the torrents that start
O'er lofty rocks; parched is my heart.

I have barred Peace, more calm, more tranquil than twilight hours
In still days of summer, fragrant with flowers.

I have barred Truth, more exquisite and reverent than a child's prayer;
Than a lover's fears, than a blossom rare.

I have barred Light that encompasses like a sea; that guides from above.
From my soul, in life,—I have barred Love.

Wilma Fitzgerald, '46.

A GYPSY GIRL

Skipping carefree down the way,
Gaudy skirts full and gay,
Silver bracelets, chains, and ring—
Clanging, clashing, jangling.
Black hair flying in the breeze,
Snapping eyes that laugh and tease,
Going nowhere, caring not—
Singing brightly, all sorrow forgot.

JoAnne DeGroat, '46.

RAIN

I sit in my snug domain,
Watching the Rain,
Watching the Rain,
Seeing the drops
Dance on the pane
Scamper and prance
Like beings insane.
I laugh to myself
But weep as I laugh
That in this world
Of sorrow and pain,
I'm safe,
Safe from the Rain.

Lois Scrivener, '46.

It would seem that the Lord of Creation, almighty though He is, has almost spent His bounty in our great state—where the West reaches the Pacific—Washington. Here are majestic mountains that pierce the clouds like great Cathedral spires; and at their feet sapphire lakes reflect their glory in their silver surfaces. Mantling the sides of these mountains are upland meadows, bountiful orchards, great seas of rolling grain, narrow canyons, and deep forests. Here hymns of praise are the glad songs of birds, here requiems are the soft moanings of the pines; here symphonies are the roaring of the winds, and the sweet harmony of the mountain streams. "Sermons in Stone" are told on every hand. Time and tempests have carved landmarks to paint the thoughts of mortals to the eternal heights. America's evergreen state — Washington — is the land where Nature reflects the beauties of her God; where God, delighting in His handiwork, smiles in peaceful benediction.

RECOGNITION

Yea! Skilled and guiless is the subtle act
And winning are the mystic ways
With which, Dear One, you have emblazed
Your sacred seal upon my yearning heart;
For, in the golden glory set apart,
I see Thee! In the phosphorous haze
Of a stately, snow-white tapers blaze
Which from yon altar glows afar,
I mark Thee in the burnished pendulum,
In verdant springs' first buttercups,
The brilliance of the mid-day sun,
And in the vale of the ciborium
From whence Thy priest will offer up
To God the Father, God the Son.

COLOR

I've often thought what beauty would be lost if the world were all in black and white. Never would one view the sapphire blue of a dreamy August sky, nor gaze upon the emerald-like verdure of a meadowland studded with golden dandelions, nor behold the pathway of scarlet left by a fiery sinking sun, which thrusts its rays over the western sky tinting even the distant clouds a rosy hue. Never would be seen a flower garden splendorous in its radiation of color where a bed of purple violets nestle demurely at the feet of tall stalks of azure blue delphinium which bow graciously to a gentle breeze. Lost too would be the sanguine red, the delicate mauve and the indigo blue of fragrant sweet peas which make a patchwork of gaudy brightness along the fence, while the flaming peonies reign over all in breath-taking loveliness and a cherry tree droops its coral tinted blossoms almost to the ground.

Yes, indeed, color is a refreshing oasis in the barren desert of life!

CONTEMPLATION

So like a haunting melody
Comes back the thought of Calvary.

Long days have passed since I have prayed—
Oh! Help me, God! for I'm afraid!

I saw You kneel the whole night through—
Dear Master—let me suffer too!

They whipped You, Lord, and I complain
If I must suffer minor pain.

The cross You carried on the road;
Redeemer—share with me Your load.

Your hands and feet by nails were crushed—
And from Your side red waters gushed.

Oh! Help me share Your pain and grief
That I may give You, relief.

So stay with me—sweet melody—
Come back—dear pain of Calvary.

This excitement having subsided we glanced at the program and are disappointed to see that we have missed the trapeze artist, Sharel Ann Mace (she wanted to be an airplane pilot but this is as high as she ever got), Jacqueline Funke's Biology lecture featuring the Phyla, and the star of the Gibson girls, Roberta Evans. At this point the conductor of the orchestra, Anturo F. Flaniganini steps upon her pedestal and announces she is honored to have as a guest singer with her today, Anna Neidhart, who has been singing with Dave's band for 11 years now. (She can't be in any Harry.) Turning, Miss Flaniganini raises her baton and the melodious strains of Donna Avery's cello fill the theater. Fate must be against her for hardly has she finished two bars when some one rises calling hysterically, "Is there a doctor in the house?" The people surge to the spot so that when Elaine Stafford arrives, little black bag in hand, she has a difficult time getting through the crowd. She finally manages and finds Gina Grj has broken that prize fingernail. Motioning frantically, Miss Stafford finally catches the eye of Ruth Bossuyt, head stretcher bearer from St. Cecil's Hospital, who with her assistant, Dorothy Dillon rushes forward with the stretcher and carries the unfortunate Gina off. The crisis being thus over, Beth Riley, official peace officer of the theater takes over her duty of quieting the guests and through her gentle voice and persuasive appeal, she soon has everyone seated and again introduces the mistress of ceremonies, Gene Kenedy, who after mumbling momentarily, addresses the audience, "In behalf of the management I would like to thank Betty Burch, manager of Rears Soebuck, for the sink stopper used in the third act of our little skit. Betty tells us that this was made from a synthetic rubber discovered by Rita Bauer and consists entirely of chewing gum donated by Virginia Mertens. Heartfelt appreciation is also extended to Miss Patricia Ryan, owner of 'Fleet's Apparel' for providing the costumes and also the services of their best dress designer, Helene Mondich. And now continuing the program, Barbara D'Arcy's daughter will give a reading selected from her mother's new book, 'A bush grows in Manhattan.' By the way Patricia Conyard is little 'Babs' dramatic teacher, and boasts a degree from Rochne's Jacksonion College of Liberal Arts. All right 'Babs'."

Babs gives her reading and graciously acknowledges the thunderous applause. As she daintily dances off the stage, the faint sound of vocal chords being tuned is heard, and we realize that these could be the voices of none other than the "Candrew Sisters," Frances Smith, Marie Vukich, and Honeygal Bradley. It seems Lolly Brownson swooned in her dilemna of whether to sing "Danny Boy" or "Billy Boy" and the ice skating act has not yet arrived so Beatrice Orchard takes this grand opportunity to take up a collection. Such is the placid condition of the theater when Betty Bertsch and Jean Ruffner, who make up the skating team appear a little more sensationally than had been anticipated. White with rage, they scream their sorrow to the world. Apparently these two owned diamond studded skates, purchased from Ellen Jane Kroetch of Bobson's Jewelry Store. The left skate of each pair was stolen and they are now vehemently demanding the return of the treasured possessions. Wait! There's a new development! Marjorie Bettinger has consented to take the case. She even has her favorite bloodhound with her who keeps repeating, "Ralph, Ralph." Someone must have called the paper too, since editor, Patricia Bollerman herself has come to cover the story. She had to leave her favorite hobby, because her reporter Mary Bea Corkery is reviewing Mary Frances Smith's best seller, "Four's Too Many," or "They All Came to Dinner. Detective Bettinger has moved out to the front sidewalk in search of clues and the greater part of the crowd is streaming after her. We also follow and as we pass through the lobby we notice that the janitresses, Charlotte Cramer, Kathryn Sems, and Betty Cowell are polishing the banisters with Pat Thorpe's new "Florine" polish. We can't linger to speak, however, for Marjorie has the culprits in hand. With everyone else we strain to see who they might be. Why look! It's Grace Anderson and her assistant Maureen Curran. Grace is plastic surgeon at Walla Walla you know, and she is suffering from slight idiosyncracies which she has developed as a result of her surroundings. Miss Bettinger is triumphantly leading them away now and the disheveled cook from Harry's place, around the corner, having just entered upon the scene is asking questions of everyone. My goodness! it's Rose Mary Brown and we still owe her fifteen cents so we'd better run!!!
